a solo piece for percussion

Love Carbin

for Daniel Alin

Program Note

Randen is a piece written during 2022/2023 for the percussionist Daniel Alin.

Using only a timpani and a singing bowl, I attempted to broaden the limits of possible sounds using the instruments.

Complex and dense passages work as "sound complexes" that recur repeatedly during the piece. I imagine these passages as a way of looking at an object from different angles, seeing something familiar but never the whole of it – parts are obscured and hidden from sight – nevertheless we keep returning to it.

Separating these sound complexes are silences, long sounds, or elaborations stretched out from within: as if zooming in to the object and seeing new paths and structures. Or simply: seeing nothing.

Instrumentation and beaters

General

Feel free to ask questions in regards to instrumental techniques or interpretation at lovecarbin@hotmail.se

This piece consists of dense, virtuosic and complex actions, separated by moments of stillness silence. There are also 'elaborations': lines of flight in which a fragment of a sound complex flees the sound complex and remains while the rest of the actions are cut off – take care to pick them up seamlessly succeeding a sound complex.

In moments of silence or fermatas take care to use very still motions as if time had stopped moving, almost freezing.

Dynamics are very extreme in this piece. Some sounds marked ppp are to be played barely audible while sounds marked ff are extremely loud. Make sure to take care of the dynamics in a way in which these two extremes are heard. Dynamics marked in quotation marks such as "ff" are to be played with the intensity of a ff even though the sound might be of a different volume.

The notation for the detailed actions in the piece is notated using 6 staves: 1 for singing bowl, 2 staves for right hand mallet and hand actions, 2 staves for left hand mallet and hand actions, as well as a staff for pedaling.
